

TALKING TO TWELVE.

Eloquent Advocates Striving to Convince the Cronin Jury.

ONE PLEA FOR THE PRISONER.

Judge Wing Makes an Attack Upon the Scientific Testimony.

THE ARGUMENT OF ATTORNEY INGHAM.

He Attempts to Show a Conspiracy and Assault the Alleged Alibi.

Judge Wing, for the defense, and Mr. Ingham, for the prosecution, occupied the attention of the Court in the Cronin case yesterday. Each made an elaborate argument for the cause he represented. Ingham closed with a strong demand for the conviction of all the prisoners.

CHICAGO, December 3.—This was an oratorical field day in the Cronin trial, and strong pleas were advanced by both the counsel for the prosecution and defense. For the latter, Judge Wing continued his argument. After touching upon a number of minor points he took up the question of the cause of death, stating the law to be that the cause must be proved in accordance with the terms of the indictment, else a conviction couldn't follow. In this case it was charged that Dr. Cronin died from the effects of the infliction of wounds and contusions on the head. The speaker went on to argue that this allegation was not proved and that the experts in their testimony could not say that the wounds on Dr. Cronin's head and face were such as to necessarily cause death.

Judge Wing next took up the question as to whether or not the blood found in the cottage was human blood. The prosecution talked as if the floor and the walls of the cottage had been deluged in blood; but none of this blood had been shown. Experts had testified to having microscopically examined 36 corpuscles, an amount invisible to the naked eye, for a single drop of blood contained nearly a million corpuscles. The prosecution had brought in large sections of flooring covered with footmarks made by paint, but no blood stains.

JUDGE WING'S ASSUMPTION.

It was safe to assume that there were no such things, or they would have been shown. There was not a cottage in the city in which it would be impossible to find as much blood as was examined by the experts, and the best evidence that could give in this case was that it was the blood of some mammal. The speaker then proceeded to attack the testimony of microscopic examination of the subject of the language, or microscopic hairy fuzz and scaly epithelium which he found in the blood specimens examined by him and which he thought peculiar to human entities.

The speaker denounced Talman as a man of small experience and little learning, who posed as a professional witness. Talman, he said, had examined some of the hair found in the trunk and in the cottage and on Dr. Cronin's head and he concluded that he could not tell them were the same hairs.

Judge Wing then told how the microscopic for the defense, men of great learning, had stated that it was impossible to predicate humanity on any of the tests.

This closed his address and Mr. Ingham took up the argument in behalf of the prosecution. After a brilliant exordium in which he described the killing of Dr. Cronin and the disposal of the body Mr. Ingham defined and illustrated the application of the law of conspiracy. He added:

CONSPIRACY TO MURDER.

So under the law, if these defendants conspire together, either alone, by themselves or with others who are at present unknown, and if some one of those conspirators in that cottage on the night of May 4 did the deed, then all are guilty. No matter whether he was in his home asleep, whether he was in the station on North Chicago avenue, or in the saloon of Matt Danahy, or no matter if he was anywhere else, if he conspired, if he encouraged, if he aided, if he abetted, if he procured, if he furnished, if he concealed, if he harbored, if he acted in concert with the man who actually struck the fatal blow.

The speaker then proceeded to reply to Judge Wing's argument, addressing himself first to the question of the value of circumstantial evidence, and quoting legal opinions to the effect that it may be stronger than any direct evidence. Judge Wing, said Mr. Ingham, had taken up the evidence bit by bit and had argued its weakness. This was simply an illustration of the old story about the fragility of the bundle of sticks, each of which could easily be broken singly. So it was in this case; each circumstantial circumstance was explained by the theory of innocence; but combined, the conclusion to which they pointed was irresistible.

As an illustration the speaker cited the case of a man who, walking along the street, saw piles of lumber and stone gathered together. He went over and he concluded that it was a mere "fortuitous concurrence of matter" but that their assembly there was in the furtherance of some design, and a close examination would reveal the fact that all of these timbers and stones were designed to fit into certain places, and that when put together they would form a great building towering toward heaven.

A PARALLEL CASE.

So it was in this case. The circumstances from the time of the meeting in Camp 20 to that of the finding of the clothes of Dr. Cronin in the sewer showed an intelligent human design. It had its origin in hate, its foundation in the charge that Dr. Cronin was a spy, and its end in the murder in the Carlson cottage and the burial in the sewer.

Then Mr. Ingham proceeded to analyze the evidence with that point in view. He said that Simonds, in buying the furniture, took the first things offered till he came to the trunk, the watch and the stars. These he was particular about, though there was no evidence that he had anything to put into them. He was not particular about the bed on which his sick brother was to lie. He did not get him even a pillow soft. The rooms were opposite Dr. Cronin's office and were well situated for the murderous deed, the doctor being called to attend the sick brother.

Why it was not committed there would probably be never known. Why did Burke rent the Carlson cottage, and hold possession of it unoccupied month after month? He was a day laborer, getting $1.50 per day, and working only part of the time. Where were the brothers and the sick sister whom he said he was to occupy the cottage with him? Why did they not appear and testify in his behalf?

SUSPICIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES.

Four or five people were to live in this cottage, yet it did not contain a single article of kitchen furniture. It was to attend one of O'Sullivan's men that the doctor was called; the cottage was close to O'Sullivan's house, and Burke told O'Sullivan about it as soon as he rented it. Subsequently O'Sullivan vouched for him.

Then the speaker dwelt at length on the suspicious character of the tenant's contract for Cronin's services. Next he hiting of the white horse and Coughlin's suspicious actions; caution to Diann to say nothing about it, and his failure to arrest the driver of the white horse when he found him were dwelt on. The driver of the white horse acted suspiciously; he wanted a horse of a less conspicuous color, and he wanted side curtains on the buggy.

It was doubtless technically true that a hair from one head could not be distinguished from a hair from another, but every-day common sense could determine such a question of hand when two bunches of hair were submitted for inspection. The speaker then went over the ground of the ride to the cottage, the murder, the subsequent bestowal of the body in the catch basin, and Burke's flight. All this connecting chain of evidence, he said, was undisputed.

ATTACKING THE ALIBI.

Mr. Ingham then touched upon the alibi testimony, and showed that it was all by friends of the accused, while the incriminating evidence was by impartial witnesses. The speaker then took up the evidence against Kuntz, and in the course of his remarks said impressively:

"It was said by this man Kuntz to a man on the Southside, that he expected to be arrested on this Cronin business. Why? Why? The defendant Kuntz—'Why, because he told me that—'

Mr. Ingham (renewing)—Because he knew the business.

The defendant Kuntz—God knows I am innocent, sir.

Mr. Ingham then proceeded to trace the connection between Coughlin, Kuntz and O'Sullivan. The speaker next reviewed the fight between Cronin and the Triangle as the moving center of the murder, and closed with an appeal for conviction.

A MAYOR DECAMPS.

Leaving His Municipality to Wonder Why He Ran Away—Chinatown in New York in a Fervent Ferment—A Great Sensation.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, December 3.—Chinatown has a sensation, and this is the story of it by Mr. Wong, the well-known Chinese reporter: Chinatown is suddenly left without its mayor, and Joss without its priest. The Hon. Choy Yon Ping, the Chinese Mayor, chief justice of the peace, Mandarin and high priest, popularly known as the "Zoon Fah Goon See" or "Zoon Fah," has suddenly and secretly deserted his post, and left for parts unknown. The Chinese city hall, at 16 Moti street, is practically in Egyptian darkness, and left in the sole care of its only official, "Foh Ye," the old town marshal and chief of the police department and department of public works.

It was alleged by some that Mr. Choy Yon Ping has simply eloped with a beautiful Irish blonde, and that he has taken her to Canada, together with the funds of the "Zoon Fah," etc., municipality, but upon closer examination of the contents of the "city hall" safe—a couple of ancient cigar boxes and a dilapidated tomato can—experts found that the Chinese Mayor had not joined the congregation of ex-aldermen, but had been strictly honest in his accounts.

The majority of his political opponents think the Mayor has only absented himself until the present Moti street scandal, accusing him of a bold attempt to sell Chinatown to the highest bidder, shall blow over. This was probably the reason why Mr. Choy secretly packed up his blankets and pipes and discharged himself from further duties of the "Zoon Fah Goon See" or "Zoon Fah" office. It is probable that he had formally tendered his resignation as high priest to Joss, as a big bunch of fragrant joss-sticks, and also the fresh ashes of a pile of burnt incense papers were found upon the altar of the congregation of Chinese gods.

DISCUSSING THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Manager Johnston, of the Exposition, Gives a Sensible Expression of Views.

In speaking about President Harrison's recommendation to Congress on the World's Fair question, Manager Johnston, of the Exposition Society, said yesterday afternoon:

"President Harrison takes a dignified view of the matter. The World's Fair should be one of the first things to claim the attention of Congress. There is not a minute to spare. America ought to be shown just as it is. The general government ought to suggest the location and have a general supervision over affairs.

"Whatever Congress may do, or wherever the fair may be held, I hope the whole people will rise up and put America where she belongs, and show what she can do. I am satisfied Pittsburgh will do her part. There is enterprise, youth and capital here; and, joined with the industries surrounding the city, leaves no room for doubt Pittsburgh will be heard from in good shape."

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Not a Pimple on Baby.

Baby one year old. Bad with Eczema. Hair all gone. Scalp covered with eruptions. Thought his hair would never grow. Cured by CUTICURA. Hair splendid and not a pimple on him.

Cured by Cuticura

I cannot say enough in praise of the CUTICURA REMEDIES. My boy, when one year of age, was so bad with Eczema that he lost all his hair. His scalp was covered with eruptions, which the doctor said was scalp head, and that his hair would never grow again. Despairing of a cure from physicians, I began the use of the CUTICURA REMEDIES. His hair is now splendid, and there is not a pimple on him. I recommend the CUTICURA REMEDIES to mothers as the most speedy, economical, and sure cure for all skin diseases of infants and children. And that every mother who has an afflicted child will thank me for so doing.

MRS. M. E. W. NORWICH, Norway, Me.

Fever Sore Eight Years

I must extend to you the thanks of one of my customers, who has been cured by using the CUTICURA REMEDIES, of an old sore, caused by a long leg of chicken or over eight years ago. He was leg amputated, but is happy to say he now has a new leg—growing. Despairing of a cure from physicians, I began the use of the CUTICURA REMEDIES. His hair is now splendid, and there is not a pimple on him. I recommend the CUTICURA REMEDIES to mothers as the most speedy, economical, and sure cure for all skin diseases of infants and children. And that every mother who has an afflicted child will thank me for so doing.
